

A decorative graphic on the right side of the page consists of several overlapping circles in various colors including pink, teal, yellow, and green. The circles are arranged in a vertical, slightly offset pattern, creating a sense of depth and movement.

emergence

This collection explores my transition into adulthood, and learning to adapt to new routines, relationships, and responsibilities.

I've always been someone who is ready for what's next - enticed by growth, ready to challenge myself just one step beyond what I think is possible. And at the same time, I am terrified by change and by leaving behind what's comfortable and familiar.

I thought I was so ready for what life after college would bring - while I loved the structure and familiar routine of being in school, I've always felt like I was meant to be in my 20s and that my next chapter would be an easy transition. I would finally be where I was meant to be.

While I LOVE the independence of living on my own, starting my career, and navigating new kinds of relationships, the transition has been much more challenging and vulnerable than I expected. I have tried a lot of new things, failed, succeeded, been intuitively spot on about some things that didn't seem right, and been so wrong about so many others. I'm learning to see things as they are, change my approaches to take control in the ways that I can, and accept and move on from the things I can't.

Through it all, expressing myself through fashion and art has helped me remain true to myself. Creating these pieces has been a huge outlet for me, and I hope that wearing them provides you with the same release.
